Our Featured Guest Performers

Penn Jazz

The University of Pennsylvania Jazz Ensemble is an 18-piece jazz big band and smaller accompanying ensembles that plays songs from a variety of styles and backgrounds. Penn Jazz, as the group is commonly known, is entirely student-run and led, with the assistance of musical director Ed Wise. The group was formed in the fall of 1973, and since then, has performed with numerous jazz legends such as Dizzy Gillespie, McCoy Tyner, the Count Basie Orchestra, Wynton Marsalis, and most recently, Christian McBride.

This spring, Penn Jazz will be performing selections ranging from New Orleans style swing to funk and even a big band rendition of Radiohead at their shows on April 6th and 7th in Dunlop Auditorium. They will also be bringing some fresh and funky energy to Spring Fling when they take the Quad stage on April 16th. More information about the band's history and upcoming shows is available at www.pennjazz.com . Please contact the booking manager, Sam Verdugo, at booking@pennjazz.com if you would like a professional quality performance at your next event.

◇ The West Philadelphia Coalition for Neighborhood Schools

West Philly Coalition for Neighborhood Schools (WPCNS) is a grassroots group that seeks to bring the community and all of its resources into our neighborhood schools. We are a group of invested community members who share a vision of a neighborhood strengthened by its local public schools and local public schools strengthened by their neighborhood. We are also brought together by our core belief that public education is a social justice issue. Towards this end, a subcommittee of the WPCNS has been working with community partners and Penn to try and bring an instrumental music program to the after school offerings at Lea Elementary.

◇ After School Arts at Penn Program

Once a week, for eight weeks each semester, talented Penn students share their skills and love of the performing and visual arts with local children ages 10-15 years of age. Participants take part in workshops focusing on dance, voice, musical instruments, visual arts and theatre all run by Penn students. Each session's activities feature educational goals such as language arts, communication skills, social skills, and movement. The semester's program culminates in a public performance at the Platt House. Participants are solicited in both September and January.

Visiting Workshops or Performances Penn student performance groups also perform and do workshops at local schools and community organizations during the academic year. If you are interested in learning more about our After School Arts at Penn program or Community Workshops, please contact Laurie McCall at lmccall@upenn.edu, Associate Director of University Life Arts Initiatives. About the Penn Band (www.pennband.net)

Our undergraduate organization is a part of the Department of Athletics at the University of Pennsylvania; like most of the other 50 performing arts groups on the Penn Campus, the Penn Band has no affiliation with any academic department and is sponsored by the Vice Provost's Office for Undergraduate Life. The organization, typically ranging between 80 and 100 members every year, is among the largest and most active student-run organizations on-campus, performing upwards of 75 times during the academic year.

But we're more than just school spirit. Over the past decade, our organization has enhanced and grown its offerings and outreach within the Greater Philadelphia community. For example, every year our organization's percussion line participates in the West Philadelphia Children's Halloween Parade, leading children in a parade in Clark Park. In recent years, our group has also made performance visits to the Penn Alexander School, participated in local charity events like The Support Center for Child Advocates' annual reception, and hosted music workshops for elementary school students in West Philadelphia via the Platt Performing Arts House After-School Program. Over the past decade, our students have also been active supporters of a number of local non-profits, including Relay for Life, The Leukemia and Lymphoma Society, and The Philadelphia Zoo. Planning is underway for school visits later this spring to the Lea, Comegys, and Sayre schools in West Philadelphia in collaboration with the Netter Center for Community Partnerships.

High School Outreach

The University of Pennsylvania Band ("The Penn Band") is an undergraduate organization dedicated to the enjoyment of music and all things "Red and Blue." Since its inception in 1897, the group has been among the University's most audible ambassadors to the local community and on the national stage. The group has regularly participated in celebrations and events here in the City of Philadelphia, and has engaged local high school musicians with "Band Days" and music clinics dating as far back as the 1930s.

Today, the Penn Band remains strongly committed to the local region, regularly participating in community events, visits to local schools, and engaging high school students via our on-campus programming including the summer camp, in-house clinics, and two different day-long honor band events. These programs have involved over a thousand high school students from over 100 high school music programs from the Greater Philadelphia Region over the sum of the past decade. These ensembles have performed at venues both on-campus, such as the Palestra and the University Museum of Archaeology and Anthropology, and also within the city of Philadelphia, including the Philadelphia Art Museum, the Welcome America Philadelphia 4th of July Parade (on regional television), the National Constitution Center, Citizen's Bank Park, and Independence Hall.
